PREFACE

ALTHOUGH it is nearly one hundred and seventy years since a suggestion was first put forward in the pages of the Gentleman's Magazine for a dictionary of anonymous and pseudonymous English literature, on the lines of those which had already appeared in Germany,* it was not until a century later that the suggestion was actively taken up.

From 1840 onwards, however, the question was always very much in the air. Appeals continued to appear in the literary journals for the supply of this great want, one daily felt by all librarians, book collectors, and literary men, until, specially incited by a correspondence which had appeared on the subject in the recently founded Notes and Queries, the learned keeper of the Advocates' Library in Edinburgh, Mr Samuel Halkett, wrote to that journal in 1856 as follows:—

"The frequent communications that have appeared on the subject of a dictionary of anonymous English writers, similar to the Dictionnaire des Ouvrages anonymes et pseudonymes of Barbier, lead me to believe that such a work will be regarded as a valuable contribution to the bibliographical literature of the country. I have myself felt the want of it greatly, and for my own purposes have long been in the habit of noting down every piece of information that came in my way. During the last three or four years I have been engaged in preparing a new catalogue of the Advocates' Library, and in the course of the inquiries, which it has been my duty to make, I have largely increased the stock of materials which I had previously collected. In these circumstances should no one better qualified than myself undertake the task, I feel strongly disposed to continue the researches in which I have been engaged, and to arrange the results with a view to publication."*

* For a detailed account of the history of anonymous and pseudonymous dictionaries, see Courtney's Secrets of our National Literature, chap. i.

Mr Henry B. Wheatley, F.S.A., who had himself been engaged in collecting materials for a similar work, generously put his collections at Mr Halkett's disposal, and several eminent bibliographers, such as Mr F. S. Ellis, Mr I. D. Haig, and the Rev. F. C. Husenbeth, offered their assistance.

When Mr Halkett died in 1871, his materials were for a short time in the charge of Mr Thomas Hill Jamieson, who succeeded him as Keeper of the Advocates' Library, but the latter's premature death again interrupted the work. It was now entrusted to the Rev. John Laing, Librarian of New College Library, Edinburgh, who worked on it with unremitting enthusiasm until his death in 1880. Dr Laing's daughter, Miss Catherine Laing, now undertook to prepare the material for publication, and it finally appeared in four volumes between the years 1882 and 1888.

The Rev. James Kennedy, who had already, as a young assistant to Dr Laing in New College Library, become interested in the undertaking and supplied Dr Laing and Miss Laing with material, now set himself the task of keeping the work up-to-date, in preparation for a new edition, which it was expected would soon be required. Working on the foundation of the titles which had accumulated between 1882 and 1888, too late for inclusion in their appropriate volumes, he laboured unceasingly to keep abreast of new material as it appeared year by year. He was an indefatigable worker, and a familiar figure in the libraries of Edinburgh, London, Cambridge, Oxford, Birmingham, and Manchester, to which he made periodic visits in search of new material. The expectation of the need of a new edition was soon realised. Volume one was out of print by 1890, and was soon followed by two, three, and four. But in Dr Kennedy's own words, "Year after year passed without anything being done, except the constant collection of new material."

* Notes and Queries, second series, vol. i., p. 129.

Finally, in 1917, Dr Kennedy approached the publishers, Messrs Oliver & Boyd, who offered to finance part of the undertaking, if funds for the remainder could be secured. In response to an appeal the Carnegie Trustees were sympathetic, and agreed to give an exceptional grant towards the cost of production. At that time Dr Kennedy's additional MS. was estimated to number 35,000 to 40,000 titles. He now set about getting these ready for publication, but he had at the same time to keep abreast with current literature, and, like his predecessors, he did not live to see the publication of the work on which he had been engaged for nearly fifty years. The work as published is, however, substantially his. When he died in 1925, volumes one and two were already in print, volumes three, four, five, and six were arranged and partly edited, and much had been done towards the compilation of an index.

The work of such editing as still required to be done was now handed over to Messrs W. A. Smith and A. F. Johnson of the British Museum, who will be responsible for the final form of volumes three to six, for the final preparation of the index, and for the supplement, which they will bring as nearly up to date as is possible in a work of which the publication is spread over several years.

This edition follows the previous one in including works in English printed in other countries and works translated into English. The entries as a rule are shorter. The arrangement remains the same, except that compound words have been entered on a slightly different system, and titles starting with the prepositions of and on are now entered under these words. Reference to authorities has been much more fully introduced than in the previous edition. In this connection it will be at once evident that the authority cited for any particular book is not necessarily the final authority for the attribution in question. To trace back the history of an attribution to its source may be, for an individual book, a fascinating occupation; for a dictionary, it is a sheer impossibility. The authorities cited must therefore be regarded generally as an indication that the reader is not faced with an ex cathedra verdict by the editors, and as a jumping-off ground for further inquiry to those who care to make it.

The practice of the previous edition is adhered to of excluding books which are not strictly anonymous, that is, which contain the author's name in the preface, dedication, or elsewhere. That this has not been invariably achieved is only too probable. So many bibliographies and catalogues follow the less rigid application of the term that to have guarded against this in all cases would have required a critical examination of every book. This rule has moreover been relaxed in a few cases where the author's name is difficult to find, and a note to that effect appended to the title.

There remains to the publishers the pleasant task of returning thanks to all librarians who have given facilities for the preparation of the work, and the hope is expressed that they will find further return in utilising the collection now made available.

Finally, grateful acknowledgment is made of the valuable assistance rendered by the late Rev. D. M. W. Laird and by Mr Alex. Mill, of the Signet Library, in reading the proofs of the first two volumes and suggesting modifications.

The present dictionary is possibly unique among dictionaries in that it may claim to be the product of at least seventy-five years of unbroken research. Even so, it is too much to hope that mistakes will not be found. A mistake in a standard work of reference is a calamity. Makers of dictionaries borrow largely of one another's wares; and mistakes, if uncorrected, tend to reproduce themselves long after they are known to be wrong. It is hoped, therefore, that librarians and others whose work entails reference to this publication, will send us a note, in detail, of such errors and omissions as they encounter, in time for their correction or inclusion in the final volume.

NOTES ON ANONYMITY AND PSEUDONYMITY

ANONYMOUS and pseudonymous books and pamphlets may be grouped, in the first place, according to the motive which led to the suppression of the author's name. Generally the motive is some form of timidity, such as (a) diffidence, (b) fear of consequences, and (c) shame.

(a) Diffidence has prevented many writers from prefixing their names to their books. In the case of first attempts this is so frequent as not to need illustration. But sometimes we find writers with established reputations in one field of literature concealing their authorship when they enter another field. Of this, perhaps the classic instance is that of Sir Walter Scott in the Waverley Novels.

(b) It is from a different point of view that timidity operates in the case of attacks on recognised authority. Here it is the fear of actual reprisals that induces authors to veil their names. Under arbitrary governments the circulation of anonymous pamphlets, secretly printed, involves serious risk to the writers if they are discovered. Of this, the history of the Stuart dynasty affords abundant proofs; and even so late as the eighteenth century, opposition to the ruling powers sometimes entailed cruel persecution. In Church affairs also, in questions of Church government as well as of doctrine, expression of opinions diverging from those held by persons in power as infallibly true, was frequently presented to the public under the veil of anonymity; here again, the history of Church and State in England and Scotland presents too many illustrations. The Appeale to the Parliament . . . against the Prelacie, issued in 1628, by Alexander Leighton, father of the Bishop of Dunblane, was rigidly proscribed by the Star Chamber; the author was fined £10,000, sentenced to imprisonment for life, and subjected to barbarous maiming of his person. The Naked Gospel, in which Dr Arthur Bury earnestly pleaded, in 1690, for a simpler, more practical, and more distinctly evangelical confession of faith, was condemned by the University of Oxford, and a copy of the book was ordered to be publicly burned. Even so late as 1705, the Memorial of the Church of England . . . by William Pettis, a barrister, was deemed so offensive by the dominant party in the Church of England that the author, when discovered, was fined and put in the pillory. Of the Covenanters in Scotland, several leaders, during the hottest days of the persecutions, fled for safety to Holland where they anonymously wrote and privately printed books which were secretly carried over to their native land for circulation among their adherents. Of the conjoint authors of An Informatory vindication of the Presbyterians in Scotland . . . James Renwick and Alexander Shields, who continued their ministry among their faithful followers, the former was seized and suffered martyrdom on the eve of the Revolution which brought civil and religious liberty.

(c) Shame may be supposed to be the motive which often leads writers of pornographic books to withhold their names, and the same motive must be at least partly responsible for the frequent anonymity of spiteful personal attacks and lampoons.

The great majority of anonymous and pseudonymous books will be found to fall under these groups. But one can imagine a variety of other possible motives, some of which may operate in addition to one of these main groups. Others may be diametrically opposed; for example, a well-known writer may be induced by confidence or over-confidence to believe that he can be successful without the aid of his previous reputation. Some writers have done this with the deliberate intention of hoaxing the critics. Again, a pseudonym may be adopted for no other reason than that the author considers his own name too prosaic. Some of the pseudonyms which writers have used are so fantastic that they must be regarded as having been adopted by way of a joke.

In the second place, anonymous and pseudonymous books fall into five classes, according to the method by which concealment is sought. These are: (1) The strictly anonymous; (2) books in which the author refers to himself by a description; (3) those in which the author adopts a false or partly false name; (4) those in which he adopts a fantastic name; (5) those in which he uses initials.

(1) Except in the case of the first method, which offers complete concealment, in all these classes varying degrees of concealment can be traced, ranging from a pseudonym which offers a complete disguise to one which hides nothing at all. An author may desire to remain unknown to the general public only, and may therefore adopt a pseudonym which is transparent to his friends; or if his motive is simply to attract attention, he may be indifferent whether his real name is divulged or not.

(2) Writers who screen themselves under a very general designation, often national, give little indication of their identity. Among multitudes who describe themselves as "An American," it might be impossible, without consulting reliable works of reference, to discover that the author of Gleanings in Europe (1837) was James Fenimore Cooper; less difficult, but still at the expense of considerable time and trouble, might it prove to learn that the "Manchester Manufacturer" who wrote England, Ireland and America (1835) was Richard Cobden; similarly, it is only by investigating certain sources of information that one might make sure of attributing The Assembly . . . a comedy (1722) to Archibald Pitcairn, M.D., who declared himself "a Scots gentleman." So vague are all such descriptions that most readers will feel they have very little assistance in identifying the writers; "an Englishman," "a clergyman," "an officer," "a university graduate," "a traveller," "an observer," are too indefinite to be of much practical assistance.

(3) Vast is the field of pseudonymous literature in which authors have adopted names that have no resemblance to or connection with those by which they are known in private life. Rightly or wrongly, this practice has come to be regarded as legitimate, especially in the case of novels, which, as works of fiction internally, may consistently bear externally, authors' names which are equally fictitious.

It is not unusual for women novelists to assume fictitious male names, e.g. "George Eliot" (Marian Evans, afterwards Mrs Cross), author of Adam Bede (1859), Daniel Deronda (1878) and other novels; "John Oliver Hobbes" (Mrs Reginald Craigie), author of The school for saints (1897), Robert Orange (1900) and other volumes; "John Strange Winter" (Mrs Arthur Stannard), wrote Bootle's Baby (1885), Mignon's secret (1887), and other works; "Lucas Malet" (Mrs Mary S. Harrison) has written The wages of sin (1890), The gateless barrier (1900), etc. On the other hand, male writers have more rarely assumed female disguise, but William Sharp, the writer of Pharais, a romance of the Isles (1894), Green fire (1896), and other works bearing on the West Highlands, put himself forward as "Fiona Macleod," and Edward Heron Allen published one novel as "Nora Helen Warddel."

On turning to consider a few instances in which authors have withheld from their readers the full names by which they are known in ordinary life, but who have, instead, given some clue by presenting merely a part or parts of their names somewhere in their works we find great variety. Among modern writers, Anthony Hope Hawkins is known as simply "Anthony Hope," the author of The Chronicles of Count Antonio, The Prisoner of Zenda, and other works; so also, Joseph Conrad Korzeniowski made himself known as "Joseph Conrad," in Almayer's folly; Chance, a tale in two parts, and other novels. Some authors on whom four names have been bestowed sometimes omit the first and the last, contenting themselves with the others: this company includes Ralph Norman Angell Lane who appears as "Norman Angell," author of The Great Refusal, and America and the new world-state; Henry Francis Prevost

Battersby is better known as "Francis Prevost," the writer of Melikot, Fires of green wood, and other works; while a lady who specialises as a novelist, Grace Leslie Keith Johnston, is best known as "Leslie Keith." Some of those with four names prefer to suppress the last; one of this company is Ascott Robert Hope Moncrieff, who lets himself be known to juveniles as "Ascott R. Hope," in All Astray, An Album of Adventures, and similar productions. More rarely authors prefer to retain some in the beginning of the series and suppress the later: this course has been adopted by Colonel Frederick Arthur Heygate Lambert, who has produced John Merridew, a romance, as having been written by "Frederick Arthur," and by Charles Harcourt Ainslie Forbes-Lindsay, the writer of America's insular possessions, who announces himself as "Charles Harcourt."

Some authors who omit their family name do not even content themselves with the simple remainder, but take a further step by modifying this in such a way as to withdraw themselves further from recognition by the general public. An excellent instance is that of the Rev. Charles Lutwidge Dodgson, an eminent mathematician, once, because of his retiring disposition, little known beyond the bounds of his university; but, after turning to amuse himself and juvenile readers, he captivated many general readers, both old and young, who have no interest in mathematics, by publishing Alice's Adventures in Wonderland, and Through the Looking-glass, and what Alice found there, ostensibly written by "Lewis Carroll"—a reversed modification of "Charles Lutwidge"—corresponding to the German, Carl and Ludwig.

Other writers who are obviously disinclined to present their names in full, and in proper order, content themselves with rearranging the constituents in such a way that their friends may easily recognise the whole aright. Thus, "T. C. Arthur" represents "Arthur Travers Crawford," the author of Reminiscences of an Indian Police Official (1894); and "M. C. Ramsay" is a transformation of Mary Ramsay Calder, who issued The Doctor's Angel, in 1914. More favoured, however, is the plan of retaining a single element of the true name, and associating with it one or more extraneous names or initials to form a new compound. Examples of this semi-fictional procedure are "Keble Howard," which John Keble Bell adopted as his pen-name in Love and a Cottage (1903), The Adorable Lad (1918), and other works; "F. Anstey" is Sir Thomas Anstey Guthrie, author of The Fallen Idol (1886), The Brass Bottle (1900), etc. "Berkeley Aikin" is the disguise assumed by Fanny Aikin Kortwright on the title-pages of The Dean (1859), and other works. Such cases of part-retention, however, are still not numerous.

Another mode of partial concealment has been preferred by some writers who give merely one or more letters of each name with intervening blanks which can easily be supplied by friends of the author cognisant of the subjects which specially occupy his attention: they would thus easily recognise as his the views expressed in print. An example is, An Enquiry into a late, very extraordinary physical transaction at E—n [Eton]. . . . By "Ch—— B——n" [Charles Bateman] (1758).

Again, a number of authors retain an anterior portion of their real name and append to this a local term indicating the place of their birth, or a region in which they afterwards lived. Mrs Elizabeth Penrose (née Cartwright) lived many years with relatives in the village of Markham, Nottinghamshire, and made herself widely known during the past century as "Mrs Markham," author of a History of England, and afterwards of a History of France. "John Strathesk" is the pen-name of John Tod, who resided in the valley of the Midlothian Esk and composed Bits from Blinkbonny, More bits from Blinkbonny, etc. "N. D'Anvers" is Nancy Meugens, a native of Antwerp, who came to England and married Arthur Bell. "Marianne Farningham" is Mary Anne Hearne, of Farningham. "Hesba Stretton" is Sarah Smith, the third, in age, of five sisters whose initials, arranged in order from Hannah, the eldest, to the youngest, form the pre-name "Hesba," while the pseudo family name is derived from Church-Stretton, where they have spent most of their lives. Other writers who have indicated the locality with which they have long been connected are William Sidney Gibson, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, who, as "William De Tyne," published The Day after to-morrow (1858); Thomas Powell, who half conceals himself on the title-page of Edgar and Elfrida (1790), under the pen-name of "Taliessen De Monmouth"; and "J. B. Selkirk," author of Bible Truths with Shakespeare Parallels and Poems. This last writer, whose name was James Brown, has incorporated in his pseudonym, not only his Christian name and place of residence, as in the previous instances, but his surname as well.

The reasons why those who write under pseudonyms finally fixed on those which they bear are often obscure; in a few cases, however, the account given seems so probable that it may be accepted as correct. "John Oliver Hobbes," it is said, decided on adopting the first word because it was the name of her father, and then added the second because it was the name of her son; the third component was taken from Thomas Hobbes of Malmesbury, the philosopher, for whom she had a profound respect, and because it was "homely." "John Strange Winter" was not fixed by the writer herself but by her publishers, who would not send out her first book bearing the name of a woman. The pen-name "Sarah Tytler" was also imposed on Henrietta Keddie by her publishers.

(4) Some authors retain on the title-page all the elements of their names, but arrange these factors in such a way as to require re-casting on the part of readers who desire to identify the writer. A simple but far from skilful plan is merely to reverse the spelling of the whole—an arrangement which frequently produces most uncouth forms. Exceptionally smooth and felicitous is "Ekalenna," substituted for "Anne Lake," who published The Beauty of Holiness, and other poems (1871). "Nitram Tradleg" (the inverse of Martin Geldart) author of A Son of Belial; autobiographical sketches (1882) has proved more pronounceable than many other inversions, but is far from elegant; "Eidrah Trebor" (Robert Hardie, who published Hoyle made familiar, in 1830) is also a strange production, but at least admits of being arranged in easy syllables; in many other cases, however, the results are purely grotesque. Mention need only be made of "Rednaxela Gnimelf" and "Drawde Rekatihw."

A kindred class is that of anagrams. These are obviously more difficult to manipulate, and as the elements are limited, considerable skill must be exercised in the transformation: with all their ingenuity, however, many authors who resort to this method of half-concealment find themselves unable to produce anything better than strange or even uncouth substitutes; and some, tacitly acknowledging failure in their attempts to utilise all the elements composing their full designation, anagrammatise merely one part.

One of the most felicitous anagrams is the transformation into "Nora Helen Warddel" of Edward Heron Allen, who issued The Romance of a quiet watering-place (Chicago, 1888); less deceptive is the change into "Job Crithannah" of Jonathan Birch, who wrote Fifty-one fables, with morals and ethical index (1833). The best substitute that Pierce Connelly could make of his name on the title-page of his treatise The Pope in England (1853) was "Pen Cler Jocelyn." Ralph Thomas, the well-known bibliographer, who published his book on Aggravating ladies as ostensibly written by "Olphar Hamst," has been fairly successful in his rearrangement of material; and so early as 1642, John Taylor, the water-poet, distinctly informs the readers of his Full and compleat answer of a late volume, that "Thorny Ailo" is an "annagram." Among those who have transformed merely their family name, mention may be made of Annie Catherine Charlotte Aldrich, who placed before the public The double Dutchman and other novels as having been written by "Catherine Childar"; George Macdonald, who, as "Dalmocand," issued a volume entitled Poems and essays . . . (1851); and Mrs Helen Clacy, known to many as "Cycla," who wrote Passing clouds and other works.

A writer who describes himself as "Red Heather" or "Alpha of the Plough" may be said to have adopted a perfect pseudonym, if his intention is to hide his identity.

(5) The number of writers who have written under their initials is very large. In this extensive field, guidance for the uninitiated is necessary to prevent them from forming rash conclusions from the meagre material before them in print. Let it be borne in mind that though substitution of one's initials has proved an easy means to diffident authors of veiling their identity, capital letters on a title-page, at the end of a preface, or elsewhere, must not in every instance be regarded as the first letters of the writer's name: such, indeed, is generally the case, but there are exceptions, which will afterwards be illustrated.

Thus Calybute Downing has given no more than his initials "C. D.," to inform his readers that he penned the Discourse of the state ecclesiasticall (1634); and Charlotte Elliott in 1840 published a book of verse, Hours of Sorrow, under her initials "C. E." Among persons bearing three names, special note must be made of Cardinal John Henry Newman, who, hardly concealed by his appended initials, "J. H. N.," has published The Dream of Gerontius (1865) and many other works. "S. H. F." stands for Sarah Hasler Fox, who, under these initials, published A metrical version of the Book of Job (1852) and Poems, original and translated (1863).

In all these instances, the letters are the initials of the writer's name and those only, and further, the initials are given in their proper order, from the first to the last. Such cases, accordingly, are relatively easy. But trouble arises when an author departs from the natural arrangement and follows another course. Irregularities of this kind are mainly five: (i) the order of the initials may be changed; (ii) instead of giving his initials, the author may substitute the finials of his name, or, indeed, any other letter there which he may prefer to select; (iii) with the name-letters he may associate others taken from words which indicate his occupation, profession, social rank, or some other detail; (iv) he may suppress one or more of his initials; (v) the initials may not be those of his name at all, but of some descriptive phrase. Such changes or combinations may prove perplexing conundrums. A few illustrations of these departures from normal order may be found helpful.

(i) Simple reversal of initials appears on the title-page of a work by John Taylor, the water-poet, An Apology for private preaching . . . by T. J. (1642); on that of a controversial treatise by Richard Smith, Bishop of Chalcedon, An answer to Thomas Bels' late challenge, named by him The Downfal of Popery . . . by S. R.; in a work by Nicholas French, Catholic Bishop of Fearns, entitled, A Narrative of the Earl of Clarendon's settlement and sale of Ireland . . . (1668), showing "F. N." at the end. Even in modern times, the same mode of concealment is continued: "T. H. C.," the writer of A Descriptive tour in Scotland (1840) is Chauncey Hare Townshend; and twofold reversal is seen in Ananga Ranga, or the Hindu art of love, translated by A. F. F. [Foster Fitzgerald Arbuthnot] and B. F. R. [Sir Richard Francis Burton] (1885). In many such cases, the reversal betrays special desire on the part of the writer to remain undiscovered. An ingenious American lady, Julia Louisa Matilda Woodruff, appears in her many works, Holden with cords (1874), Belle Rue, or the Story of Rolf (1891), etc., as "W. M. L. Jay."

(ii) More rarely, but doubtless more effectively, because unexpectedly, some writers have occasionally used the last letters of their names when desirous of confining knowledge of their authorship to a favoured few. This course was adopted by Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury, who signed "T. T." at the close of his Answer to Mr Henry Payne's Letter concerning his Majesty's Declaration of Indulgence (1686?); by Robert Boyle, who published, in 1675, Some considerations about the reconcileableness of reason with revelation, and subscribed himself, "T. E., a layman"; by Thomas Elrington, Bishop of Fearns and Leighlin, who, by similarly appending "S. N." to A Reply to John Search's Considerations on the law of Libel (1834), and to other prints, made it known only to intimate friends that he was the author; in like manner, the Rev. Michael Augustus Gathercole, published Letters to a Dissenting minister of the Congregational Independent Denomination (1833), and subscribed himself "L. S. E."; further, "N. Y." is all that John Dury has given of his name on the title-page of his Discourse representing the liberty of conscience that is practised in foreign parts (1661).

Still more effective, as a means of concealment adopted by some writers, has been the selection, from their names, not of the first or the last letters in each part of the whole name, but of letters taken, in each portion, at the same distance from the beginning. So rarely has this course been followed that few instances are found. In The Diary of a dutiful son, by "H. E. O.," these capitals are the second letters in each portion of the name of the author, Thomas George Fonnereau. Another example is that of Dr Richard Bentley, who, in 1721, issued a pamphlet, entitled Dr Bentley's proposals for printing a new edition of the New Testament . . . by a member of Trinity College, Cambridge, and appended, in a note, are the second letters in each part of his name, "J. E."

(iii) Readers nowadays are well provided by printers with reasonable punctuation, by means of which there is separation made between initials of personal names, in capital letters, and additions to these, also in capital letters, prefixed or affixed, designed to convey information regarding the individual. But when one comes to deal with works printed in the eighteenth century or earlier, these additions are frequently made without the separating marks now deemed indispensable for smooth and easy reading, and for correct interpretation. A few illustrations may suffice to show the difficulty often experienced in reading old print from which helpful commas are provokingly absent. In 1710, a Scottish Episcopalian controversialist published anonymously An Answer to Mr James Hog, his letter to a gentleman . . . particularly as to what concerns M. R. C. P.; these letters are to be read as "Mr Robert Calder, Priest," the author. In 1687, there was published a print entitled, Animadversions by way of answer to a sermon preached by Dr Thomas Kenne [Ken] . . . by F. J. R.; these capitals stand for "Father John Reid," a Jesuit. Many, who for the first time, read Ane Detectioun of the doingis of Marie Quene of Scottis tuiching the murther of hir husband . . . translatit out of the Latine quhilk was written be M. G. B., may require to be informed that the last three capitals are to be read as "Master George Buchanan"; and the same remark applies to Ane Admonitioun direct to the trew Lordis Mantenaris of the Kinges Graces authoritie, "M. G. B." A treatise entitled, Gospel musick; or, the singing of Davids Psalms . . . in the publick congregation or private families asserted and vindicated . . . (1644) also requires interpretation of a long series of capitals "N. H. D. D. M. M. S." in which the author's initials are included; the first four letters signify "Nathaniel Holmes (or Homes), Doctor in Divinity." An earlier print, entitled, A Shorte treatise of politike pouuer . . . (1556) likewise requires explanation of the series of capitals on the opening page, where "D. J. P. B. R. VV." are intended to be read as "Doctor John Poynet, Bishop of Rochester [and afterwards of] Winchester." A Parallel or briefe comparison of the [Laudian] Liturgie with the Masse-Book, the Breviarie, the Ceremoniall, and Romish ritualls . . . (1641) is set forth as having been written by "R. B. K.," letters which signify Robert Baillie, at that time minister in Kilwinning; but in A Review of Dr Bramble [John Bramhall], Bishop of Londenderry, his Faire warning against the Scotes disciplin (1649), the indication of authorship, "R. B. G.," must be interpreted as meaning Robert Baillie, in Glasgow, where he was at that date a Professor of divinity in the University. Note should further be taken of the practice, sometimes continued even in recent times, of bishops who suppress their family name and substitute an indication of the see over which they preside: thus, in 1824, James Warren Doyle, Roman Catholic Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin, issued A Defence by J. K. L. of his Vindication of the religious and civil principles of the Irish Catholics.

(iv) The single letter "A." indicates only the family name of Matthew Arnold in The strayed reveller (1849) and Empedocles on Etna (1852); in the same way, there is nothing on the title but the letter "C." to inform readers that Mrs James Farley Cox wrote Home thoughts (1902).

(v) Many books have appeared under such initials as A.M. (Artium Magister) or O.P. (Old Playgoer), etc. Among the anonymous literature of the European War will be found books by D.S.O. (Distinguished Service Order), G.S.O. (General Staff Officer), F.O.O. (Forward Observation Officer), and the like.

Attention may be further directed to two other classes of pseudonyms which, although they do not appear to be so, are the initials of the authors. Thus an Indian official (Edward Hamilton Aitken), not feeling disposed to divulge his name in full, put only his initials on his books; yet even these are not printed as E. H. A. but as EHA; the chief of his works are The tribes on my frontier, Behind the bungalow, A naturalist on the prowl; or in the jungle. A gifted literary lady, born on the European Continent, and bearing the name of Therese Albertine Luise von Jakob, afterwards migrated to America where she married a Professor Robinson: she has published several works in English, History of the Colonisation of America, Historical view of the language of the Slavic nations, etc., under her initials, which, however, are not printed apart (T. A. L. V. J. or T. A. L. V. I.) but in the form TALVI. Near the middle of the seventeenth century, a period of keen controversy in this country regarding Church government and worship, there was published a notable work, "An Answer to a booke [by Bishop Joseph Hall] entituled, An humble remonstrance, in which the originall of Liturgy [and] Episcopacy is discussed . . . written by Smectymnuus." It was the combined production of five divines, Stephen Marshall, Edmund Calamy, Thomas Young, Matthew Newcomen and William Spurstowe, whose initials were arranged in the order now given, without any punctuation.

The other way is by forming from the initials a pseudonym designed to represent the pronunciation, in succession, of each letter: here, again, a few examples will best illustrate the process. The form "Aitiache" [Ai-ti-ache], represents "A. T. H.," derived from Annie T. Howells, the writer of Popular sayings (1877): and "Effessea" [Eff-es-sea] gives the pronunciation of "F. S. C.," i.e., Francis Sewell Cole, who wrote Oceanica (1871); "Arrelsee" [Arr-el-see] is the equivalent of "R. L. C.," Robert L. Cope, who is credited with The Life, confession, and adventures of Albert Teufel (1867).

The practice of writers who have made use of more than one pseudonym should be recorded. In the earlier years of the nineteenth century, Sir Richard Phillip issued elementary educational works in English and French, under such fictitious names as "Rev. David Blair" (A grammar of Chemistry, A grammar of the English language, First lines of arithmetic, etc.), and others under the names of "Rev. J. Goldsmith" (Geography illustrated on a popular plan, The biographical class-book), "S. Barrow" (A popular dictionary of facts and knowledge, etc.),

"M. L'Abbé Bossut" (The first French and English grammar), as well as other designations now difficult to discover. More recently, Charles Grant Blairfindie Allan placed before the public several works bearing his own name; but as "Cecil Power," he issued two novels (Philistia and Babylon); as "Olive Pratt Reyner," he published Rosallan, and under the disguise of "Martin Leach Warborough," he produced Tom, unlimited. Alexander Hay Japp sent out several works showing his real name, but also modified this as "H. A. Page" in bringing out his Memoir of Nathaniel Hawthorne, The Life of De Quincey, and other volumes; as "E. Conder Gray," he wrote Wise words and loving deeds; as "A. F. Scot" [? A Forfarshire Scot], he composed Lilith and Adam, a poem; Her part, a novel, was laid before the public as ostensibly the work of "A. N. Mount Rose," a designation probably suggested by the fact that he was born near Montrose.

Considerable confusion has inevitably resulted from the fact that the self-same pseudonym has been adopted by more than one author; hence, readers who, after learning the real name of only one of the writers using the same pseudonym must be excused, until they learn the whole truth, if they attribute to one and the same person all works on which the veiling name appears. "Owen Hall" has been adopted as their pen-name by two modern writers; fortunately, each confines himself to a distinct line of work, so that they can easily be distinguished. James Davis is a dramatist, who has issued Flodora, and The Gaiety-girl, musical comedies; while H. . . H. . . Lusk is a novelist, who has already produced Eureka, The track of a storm, Jetsam, and other works. Further, it seems that there are at least three different persons, each with some ground for taking "George Douglas" as his or her pseudonym: one is Lady Gertrude Georgina Douglas, who has given us two novels, Brown as a berry, and The red house by the river; another is Mrs George Ferme (née Douglas), of Haddington, also a novelist, who wrote Tib; the third is George Douglas Brown, the author of The house with the green shutters. A much more difficult task is to determine correctly the works of several persons who have written as "Peter Parley." The original "Peter" was certainly Samuel Griswold Goodrich, who provided juvenile readers with most interesting material in Faggots for the fireside; or, tales of fact and fancy, A grammar of modern geography, Make the best of it, A Book of anecdotes, Illustrations of astronomy, etc. But his phenomenal success induced other writers to enter the same field, using the same pseudonym: one of these was William Martin, who wrote Peter Parley's Annual, Our Oriental Kingdom; or, tales about India, Stories from sea and land, etc.; another was George Mogridge, the author of Tales about shipwrecks and disasters at sea, Tales about Great Britain and Ireland, etc.; still another was probably

T. Wilson, the writer of Tales about America and Australia, Tales about Asia and Africa, etc.

Accustomed as we now are to undisguised literary collaborations through acquaintance with such works as Liddell and Scott's Greek Lexicon, and Besant and Palmer's Jerusalem, it may come as a surprise to learn that in pseudonymous literature a considerable amount of co-operation is concealed under what, on a title-page, indicates the name of a single individual. Thus "Michael Field" is the pen-name assumed by Katherine Harris Bradley and Edith Emma Cooper (an aunt and her niece) and appears on the title-page of all their works, Anna Ruina, Poems of adoration, etc. Similarly, "J. Freeman Bell" conceals Israel Zangwill and L. Cowen, authors of The Premier and the painter (1889).

Finally, something may be said of witticisms in pseudonymous literature. "One Short" is Alfred Short, who composed (in verse) Adventures and sketches at New Brighton (1888). "A. D. Sector" [A Dissector] is A. O. Garrison, the writer of Christian Science dissected (1903). "Col. D. Streamer," a modification of "Coldstreamer" represents Harry Graham, Captain in the Coldstream Guards, author of Ballads of the Boer War (1900), and similar collections. "A Veiled politician" is a lady, Mrs Bevan, of Birmingham, who issued The path to peace in 1913. In 1819, there appeared A Peep at the Wiltshire Assizes . . . written "by one who is but an attorney": it was the work of George Butt. A brochure entitled Alphabetical fancies, rhymed riddles, and local lays "by two idle Bees," is the joint production of Alfred Hall Browne and Amelia Browne (1891).

During the eighteenth century in particular, there appeared some pamphlets and other prints presenting formidable rows of capital letters at the point on the title-page where either the name of the author, or some clue for finding it, is usually given. But the number of letters in such cases is so large that one must be prepared for much more than the author's initials. The total is baffling to the uninitiated, and the facetiousness is evident. During the year 1720, a well-known writer sent forth a volume bearing the title, Miscellaneous works, comical and diverting . . . by T. R. D. J. S. D. O. P. I. I., these letters stand for "The Reverend Doctor Jonathan Swift, Dean Of Patrick's In Ireland." A controversial pamphlet was issued in 1737, entitled, An Enquiry into the meaning of Demoniacks in the New Testament, by T. P. A. P. O. A. B. I. T. C. O. S.: these capitals are to be read as "The Precentor And Prebendary Of Altham Boreale In The Church Of Salisbury," i.e., Dr Arthur Ashley Sykes. A like conundrum was set before the public in 1754, being An Inquiry into the grounds and nature of the several species of ratiocination . . . by A. G. O. T. U. O. C., letters which are to be interpreted as "A Gentleman Of The University Of Cambridge," viz., Owen Manning, A final illustration, reserved for the close, as more trying than others previously given, is the following: The French Gardiner, instructing how to cultivate all sorts of trees and herbs for the garden . . . first written in French by R. D. C. D. V. B. D. N., and now translated into English . . . " 1658. The initials, given in reversed order, are those of the original " Nicolas De Bonnefons, Valet De Chambre Du Roi."

The foregoing notes are intended to forewarn those who consult these volumes of the difficulties to be expected in anonymous and pseudonymous literature, but they may be also found helpful in suggesting solutions.

ABBEY (the) of Kilkhampton ; or, monumental records for the year 1980. Faithfully transcribed from the original inscriptions, which are still perfect, and appear to be drawn up in a stile devoid of fulsome panegyric, or unmerited detraction ; and compiled with a view to ascertain, with precision, the manners which prevailed in Great Britain during the last fifty years of the eighteenth century. [By Rev. Sir Herbert Croft.] Large 4to. Pp. 75. [D.N.B., vol. 13, p. 209.] London, 1780

The date 1980, near the beginning of the title, prepares the reader for the satirical nature of the contents of the work. This consists of a number of fictitious epitaphs on prominent personages living in 1780 and readily identified at that time. The work was immensely popular : at least fourteen editions appeared.

ABBEY (the) of Saint Alban. Some extracts from its early history and a description of its conventual church ; intended chiefly for the use of visitors. [By Henry J. B. Nicholson, D.D.] Second edition. 8vo. Pp. 79. [J. P. Anderson's Brit. Topography.] London, 1856

ALEXANDER'S expedition down the Hydaspes and the Indus, to the Indian Ocean. [A poem, by Thomas Beddoes, M.D.] (Privately printed.) (Plate.) 4to. [W. ; Martin's Cat.] Madeley, 1792

This work owes its origin to a conversation, which took place at the table of the late Mr William Reynolds, in which some men of taste contended that Dr Darwin's poetical effusions were inimitable. Dr Beddoes held a contrary opinion, and to try the point, produced to the same party, a short time after, a manuscript of the present piece as from his friend Darwin ; and sent it to him, previous to publication. The advocates for Darwin's style were deceived, and Beddoes triumphed. Mr

Reynolds had it printed at his own expense. It was printed at Madeley; the types were set by a woman, and the engravings made on wood by the then clerk of the parish. See Martin's Cat.

[Belfast], 1697

This is one of several pamphlets issued during a controversy in the North of Ireland between the Episcopalians and the Presbyterian Dissenters. In 1695, the Rev. Joseph Boyse, of Dublin, published "The Case of the Protestant Dissenters of Ireland in reference to a Bill of Indulgence," which drew from Dr Tobias Pullen "An Answer to a paper entitled, The Case of the Protestant Dissenters, . . ." to which Boyse replied in "The Case of the Dissenting Protestants . . . vindicated." Pullen then published "A Defence of the Answer to a paper intituled, The Case of the Dissenting Protestants." John Macbride next intervened by issuing the above "Animadversions," in which he included a reply to Dr Edward Synge, who had published "A Peaceable and friendly address to the Nonconformists." Synge finally printed (in 1698) "A Defence of the Peaceable and friendly Address."

APOLOGY (an) for the Protestants of France, in reference to the persecutions they are under at this day; in six letters: the first treats of the priviledges they have by the Edict of Nantes. The second gives an account of some part of the injuries and outrages they do them, whereby to force them to change their religion. The third proves that their religion inspires no other principle into them, but an unmoveable loyalty to their prince. The fourth justifies their innocence against the unjust charge of Monsieur Maimbourg. The fifth defends them in relation to those troubles that fell out in Lewis XIII. reign, and the affair of Rochel. The last shews that the Papists, by the principles of their religion, are guilty of all the crimes they wrongfully lay to the Protestants, in reference to kings. [Translated from the French by Sir Roger L'Estrange.] 4to. [Brit. Mus.] London, 1683

APOLOGY (an) for the pulpits: being an answer to a late book [by John Gother], intituled, Good advice to the pulpits; together with an appendix, containing a defence of Dr [Thomas] Tenison's sermon about alms; in a letter [from Tenison] to the author of this Apology. BANDERS (the) disbanded: or an accurat discourse solidly and plainly demonstrating how inconvenient, scandalous & sinfull it is, in the present circumstances of the Church of Scotland, for ministers of Christ there, that they may obtain a pretended liberty to preach and administer the sacraments, in such and such particular paroches, to give bond to their present rulers, that they shall live peaceably: or for others, in their name and behalf, to bind to the said rulers for their peaceable living, and to present them when called so to do, and in case of faillzie to underly a great penalty: and so discovering clearly the great unfaithfulness of the affirmative vote, of the late meeting of ministers at Edinburgh, (Anno 1679) concerning the lawfullness of giving the bond then presented by the Councill. . . . BENEFIT (the) of Christs death ; or the glorious riches of God's free grace, which every true believer receives by Jesus Christ and him crucified ; first compiled and printed in the Italian tongue [by Aonio Paleario] and afterwards translated and printed in the French tongue, and out of French into English by A. G. [Arthur Golding]. 8vo. Fourth edition. London, 1638

See an earlier edition below.

The first edition of the original Italian was published anonymously at Venice in 1543. So great was the popular demand for copies that 40,000 were sold within six years; but as the work was of a Protestant tendency, its author was tried by the Roman authorities and condemned to death. His book was rigidly proscribed, and every copy that could be discovered was destroyed, so that only two of the earliest issues are now known to have been preserved. Translations, however, were made into Spanish, French, and English: the first in our own tongue (by Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devonshire) was printed in 1548. A modern reprint was edited for the R. T. S. with an introduction by the Rev. John Ayre. A fuller edition, containing facsimiles of the original Italian and of early translations, appeared later, edited by the Rev. C. Babington.

BOOK (a) of Christian exercise appertaining to Resolution [issued by Robert Parsons, S.J.]; perused and accompanied now with a Treatise tending to pacification, by Edmund Bunny. 8vo. [Gillow's Bibl. Dict., v., p. 278; D. N. B., vol. 7, p. 271.] London, 1584

The introductory part of this composite work is the earlier portion of the anonymous treatise issued (at Rouen) in 1582 by Parsons, with the title, The first Booke of Christian exercise appertayning to resolution. This portion, however, was adapted to Protestant use by Bunny (who did not know the author's name) with the addition of his own "Treatise," as given above. Several other editions of this Protestant Christian Directory soon followed. Then Parsons, in 1585, brought out his own second edition, with the modified title, A Christian Directorie, guiding men to their salvation, commonly called the Resolution: devided into three books. With reproofe of the corrupt and falsified edition . . . published by E. Buny. N.P. 1585. Fcap 8vo. Pp. 900.

From this Prayer-Book, all the Creeds, and every thing in support of the Divinity of Christ were excluded. In the following year, a second edition, containing the Apostles' Creed, was published. The book was suppressed very soon after publication. It was attributed to Chevalier Bunsen, and was said to have been issued with the sanction of the Prince Consort; but in a letter which appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette, and which was written by Basil Pickering, son of the publisher of the work, the real author was stated to be Henry Hunt Piper, a Unitarian minister.

ΧΕΙΡΕΞΟΧΗ, the excellency or handy work of the royal hand. [By Dr Thomas Allen.] 3 vols. 4to. Pp. vi., 37. London, 1665

"The Epistle dedicatory" to James II. (then Duke of York) is signed "T. A., M.D."

In Wm. Beckett's "Enquiry in the antiquity and efficacy of touching for the king's evil" [8vo. 1722], at p. 58 is the following:—

"Four years after this, Dr Thomas Allen, sometime of Caius College in Cambridge, afterward physician in ordinary to King Charles the Second, published a treatise of the cure of the evil by the touch, which he entitles, 'The excellency or handy-work of the royal hand,' dedicated to the Duke of York."

In the British Museum copy of this pamphlet is the following note:—

"By Dr Harris:—This Dr Harris was Burgess for S. Albans in the Parliament of 1661: His father, who was a chirurgeon there, bought up all the copies and burnt [them]."

It is not probable that it was written by Dr Harris, as his name does not agree with the initials signed to the dedication, while Dr Allen's initials do.

CHRISTIAN (a) caveat to the old and new sabbatarians; or, a vindication of our gospel-festivals. Wherein is held forth, I. That the feast of Christ's nativity is grounded upon the scriptures; was observed in the pure, antient, apostolique times; and is approved by all reformed Churches. II. That Christ was born on the 25th day of December; and all objections to the contrary refuted. III. That the keeping holy of the Lords day was appointed by the Christian Church; and that the morality, and divine institution of the Lords day are mere fictions. IV. That the day of Christs nativity, the day of his passion, and the like, have equall authority, equall antiquity, equall right to be observed as the Lords day; and that to work on those dayes is equally sinfull. V. That the observation of the Sabbath day is abolished in Christ; and that to call the Lords day the Sabbath, is senslesse, Jewish, unchristian, unwarrantable. By E. F., Esq. [Edward Fisher]. 4to. [Bodl.] London, 1650
